TechTarget's website has compiled a crib of all cribs (meta crib, if you like). It is chock full of links to other cribs with topics ranging from Microsoft Office, Internet slang, and programming to search engines, operating systems, browser shortcuts, and blogs. Call me crazy, but I can't help but love the cheat sheet on the cheat sheet. Like any good reference document, this one is classified in alphabetical order and gets right to the point. If you still can't find the information you need, we have a lot of cribs here. These cooling sheets will keep you cool and dry until the morning. Getty Images Suffer from Night Sweat? If you are going through menopause, suffering from illness, or just run hot, then night sweats can ruin the chaos on your sleep cycle. Fortunately, the simple task of switching out of sheets can help improve your rest by keeping you cool and dry during the night. Sleep experts recommend choosing natural fibers like cotton and bamboo, or sheets of high-tech braided fabric that pull sweat away from your skin and dry quickly (similar to your workout clothes). And while you've certainly heard that luxurious sheets with a high number of strands will keep you dancing through Dreamland, it turns out their tighter weave makes them less breathable. The National Sleep Foundation recommends a thread count of 200 to 400. Sleep better today with these 15 editor-approved sets of cooling sheets. Many sops occur when children run up to unfamiliar dogs that are not in the mood to play. Children watch cartoons and see animals as very friendly, pleasant, affectionate things, notes Peter Borchelt, Ph.D., applied animal behavior counselors in Brooklyn, New York. Teach the child early on that the dog is his own being and may not want to approach. Don't run up to an unknown dog. First, ask (or ask the child to ask) the owner if the dog is friendly. If so, approached the dog slowly. If the child is very young, stay with him by putting yourself between him and the dog. Don't be fooled by the wagging tail. It's not always a sign of friendliness. Tell the child that if the dog barks or retreats, wagging its tail, it should let the puppy alone. Let the dog take on initiative. The child should remain motionless and hold his hand, gently calling the dog. If he approaches, he can let the dog sniff his hand. Only then should the child start gentle caresses. This exchange of sniffing, then animal is a gesture of friendliness, friendliness, dog's equivalent of a handshake.
